THE LOVED DEAD

Continued.

situational system so far as the relation of the Vice-President to the presidency is concerned.

AUSTRIA.

Vienna, 21.—The Algemeine Zeitung describes the death of President Garfield as a heavy blow to America, but says what is worse is the fact that Arthur succeeds him.

The Deutsche Zeitung: The name of Garfield will have an honorable place on the immortal roll of presidents of the United States.

FRANCE.

Paris, 21.—Galignani's Messenger, which prints the announcement of the death, surrounded by a mourning border, has an elegant tribute to Gen. Garfield's virtues, evidently from the pen of an American.

President Grevy has telegraphed a message of condolence.

The British under foreign secretary and British ambassador were among the first at the American legation.

Le Pays says: As supreme homage to his noble victim, all people ought henceforth to ignore the name of the murderer.

La France says the widow may be sure that her name will be inscribed in history beside her husband's.

RUSSIA.

St. Petersburg, 21.—The death of President Garfield inspires unfeigned sorrow here. The Czar will send a message of sympathy.

INDIA.

Bombay, 21.—The death of President Garfield excites profound regret.

ITALY.

Rome, 21.—King Humbert telegraphed to the United States the condolence of himself and Queen. The foreign minister sent a similar telegram in the name of government and the nation.

Paris, 21.—The Soir intimates that the regime of despotism and corruption which flourished under Grant will once more flourish under Arthur.

GERMANY.

Berlin, 21.—Many Americans called at the embassy to-day to express sympathy at the death of President Garfield. A public meeting will soon be held.

Rome, 21.—The grand master of the Italian Free Masons, refers to President Garfield's death.

Paris, 21.—The American flag, draped with crepe, appears on the Grand Hotel.
All newspapers eulogize President Garfield, and express profound regret at his death. They recall the fact that he was the architect of his own fortunes, and extol his simple mode of life and his wife's courage.

The Temps, representative of a widespread class of republicans, says: His name has been rendered imperishable by his fate. During the four months he has served in power, he, by virtue and integrity surpassed all hopes. He was elected to the Presidency as a party man, but as soon as stricken he became the respected representative of the entire nation. This shows honor both to himself and the country. We hope President Arthur will reduce the party spirit to silence, that he will be president of the republic, not of the society of the republican party.

ALL EUROPE.

London, 21.—Flags of all American consulates and legations through all Europe are at half mast.

The Telegraph says—throughout the civilized world the gloomy news brought a shock of profound sorrow. There was no potentate on whom hatred had less cause to fix malignant eyes, but President Garfield has shown the fate of the Czar. America and Europe are now thinking of the measureless calamity which has befallen the nation of the noble chief whose high principles, marked unselfishness and breadth of intellectual status—gave promise of tenure of power, fruitful, invaluable acts of public policy.
America has lost a great citizen and the world a fine example of humanity; but while the spirit of this upright and high-hearted President passed away it insures certain reliance upon the love of heaven.
We may venture to say that even in his loss, America also gains. She has gained knowledge of that deep sympathy which England feels for her fortunes.

Elberon, 21, 8:30 a.m.—It is understood that President Arthur has determined to go through to Cleveland in company with the cabinet. An additional guard has been placed about Franklyn Cottage for the purpose of preserving order. Hundreds of people are arriving momentarily.

THE FUNERAL TRAIN.

The engine and coaches are now in readiness to start. The entire train is heavily draped in mourning, and presents a funeral appearance. Crowds of new arrivals surge into the surrounding grounds. Every movement on Ocean avenue, for two blocks in either direction, is blocked with vehicles. The large gathering, composed of all classes, is very orderly and appreciative.

Arrangements have just been completed and notices given that all desiring to view the remains of the late chief magistrate. The line has formed and people are pressing in single file through the cottage. Two sentinels are stationed at each side of the entrance door to prevent more than one person entering at a time. The casket is very unpretentious, being covered with rich black cloth, and with the exception of the heavy silver mountings, is perfectly plain. The only decoration is a large V-shaped aigle palm, which extends from the foot of the casket upwards. The remains are lying in one of the rooms on the first floor of the cottage, and people pass in at the east door and, without stopping, out at the west. The appearance of the late President is so changed that persons familiar with his natural countenance can scarcely recognize him.

9 a.m.—The church bells are tolling, and the crowd continues to increase.
The cars which are to be used for the funeral train have just been run up to Franklyn Cottage.

APPEARANCE OF THE CORPSE.

New York, 21.—Post's Long Branch: The President's left hand is laid across his breast, after the manner he had in life. This was done in order to make his resemblance as near to life as possible.
Nobody will be allowed to enter the death chamber, which has been put in order, as it was when the President was brought to Elberon. The body is so greatly shrunk that artificial means had to be resorted to, to give the clothes the appearance of fitting. In addition to the natural shrinking from his illness, the operation connected with the autopsy has left the body in an even more emaciated state. A plaster cast was taken of his face yesterday, as well as of his right hand. In taking the cast of the hand it was somewhat discolored so this hand will not be seen. The effect of the oil used upon the face prior to taking the cast disfigures the features somewhat and slightly altered the color of the face, so the appearance is very much less natural, even than it was just after death. The President had a massive head, and the large bones show very prominently. The cheeks are fallen in. The beard has been so arranged about the parted lips and coronal that scar and such arrangement has been made about the pillow as to still further conceal the swelling which swelled away his life. The undertaker says in his opinion it will not be safe to expose the body after it leaves here. The effects of the fluids in embalming are such as to have already hardened the features. A number of journalists who have been so closely watching the president's case all these weary weeks, were given an opportunity for the first view of the body. Sentinels stood each side of the entrance. The coffin lay in the hallway of the lower floor, with a soldier at the head and foot of it. The coffin was black, with silver handles. Black rods ran along the side, and upon the top was a silver plate, with an inscription. The coffin was lined with white satin. Only the face and shoulders were visible, and one needed to know that all that remained of James A. Garfield lay there, to recall the features so familiar during life. The face, to those who knew General Garfield only too well, was not could not have been recognized. Even the features were no longer there.

There was an expression about the lower lip which those who knew him best would recognize. The cheeks were gone, and the brow had lost the massive appearance which characterized it in life. The involuntary whispered remarks of all as they gazed upon the loved form with a shudder were,
"I never should have recognized him." How he must have suffered. The emaciated form told how much. It was most marvelous that he lived so long.
As the crowd slowly entered and left the hall, the bell of the little chapel in the distance was tolled. Its tones could be only faintly heard above the roar of the train.

AT WASHINGTON.

Washington, 21.—The District commissioners held a meeting to-day and have promulgated the following: It becomes the sorrowful duty of the commissioners to announce to the people of the District of Columbia the death of the President of the United States, who expired at Long Branch, at 10:35 p.m., on the 19th instant. Illustrations in arms, in the form of the falls of Niagara, and as chief magistrate of the United States, the nation mourns his sad and untimely demise, and bows in sorrow to the disposition of the great ruler of the universe. As a slight expression of universal feeling of national bereavement, the commissioners direct that public offices and business in the District, including the public schools, be closed and suspended until further orders, and that public buildings of the District be appropriately draped in mourning, and they earnestly recommend to their fellow citizens the observance of perfect quiet and order during the progress of the obsequies of the national dead, and such manifestations of respect and sorrow as befits the solemn occasion.
The District military is ordered to hold themselves in readiness for any duty to which they may be assigned under orders of the general of the army.
The following order was issued this evening by Gen. Sherman:

GENERAL ORDER NO. 91.

The following order from the secretary of war announces to the army the death of James A. Garfield, President of the United States.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Sept. 20, '81.

With profound sorrow the secretary of war announces to the army that James A. Garfield, President of the United States, died at Elberon, N. J., at 10:35 o'clock on the evening of September 19th, '81. The great grief which is felt by the nation at the untimely death of the President will be especially felt by the army, in whose service he bore so conspicuous a part during the war of the rebellion. In him the army has lost a beloved commander-in-chief, friend and comrade. Proper honors will be paid to the memory of the late chief magistrate of the nation at the best quarters of each military department and division and each military station. The general of the army will give the necessary instructions.

(Signed) ROBT. T. LINCOLN, Sec'y.

JAMES, JR.'S, GRIEF.

Williamstown, Mass., 21.—When Harry Garfield left Williams College for Elberon he left word that his brother, James A. Garfield, who is confined to his room with a severe attack of malaria fever, contracted at the White House, should not be informed of his father's death until he was better. The tolling of church bells and the excitement around the suspicions of James, and it was thought best by his attending physicians that he be informed of the truth. A burst of grief followed, but he is now besting the trial bravely, though he is still in a precarious condition. He will be removed to-day to President Hopkins' house. The college went on as usual this morning, memorial services will probably be held in a day or two.

ORPHAN BOYS.

Cleveland, 21.—The orphaned sons of Mentor, were not informed of their father's death until after breakfast this morning. For a time they wept bet-terly, but afterward grew quiet and bore their affliction with almost philosophical calmness. At Mentor are also Joseph and Ralph, Mrs. Garfield's brother and her aged father, both were much affected, yet the result was not unexpected.

A mass meeting of citizens was held this afternoon in the tabernacle which was filled to overflowing. Speeches fitting to the occasion were made by Judge Rufus W. Ranney, Bishop Gilmore of the Catholic diocese, several clergymen, and others.
A committee was appointed to accept for the reception of the body of the departed President, and care for it while in the city. Gen. Jas. Barnett, master of the day, when Lincoln's body lay in state here, sixteen years ago, will be marshal, and the architect who designed the catafalque which the president remains then lay, has been directed to make plans for another.
